Introduction

Java is one of the areas that have produced many kinds of literature. The development of Javanese literature began since 7th century along with the first acculturation process with the Indian culture. It was happened in Central Java and East Java. The culture of India had influenced in three aspects of life namely; (1) religion and knowledge as well as art, (2) society's rule, (3) technology including art and literature.¹

The second acculturation was happened in accordance with the arrival of Islamic traders in Javanese island. During their trading, these people also disseminated their religion. Initially, this religious dissemination was proposed to common people, and then this activity was intended to members of the royal family. This activity was conducted during the conflict emerged in the Majapahit kingdom; at that time there were many Javanese scholars converted to Islam. There were many underpinning reasons why this group of people changed to be Muslim such as they are influenced by the Islamic teaching, or they look for their safety.² The next step, Islam took over the entire basic concepts of life including society's rule, literature, art and construction.³

The peak of Islamic dissemination in Java was occurred during the period of King Brawijaya V (the last king of Majapahid kingdom).⁴ At that time, the king converted to Islam which motivated his citizens to be Muslim. This process of Islamic dissemination had met with the existing Javanese tradition that was influenced by Hinduism and Buddhism. The evidence related with this matter is an old Javanese literature; there are a great number of manuscripts produced such as classical kakawin, babad, Serat, and so forth. In addition, the influence of Islam on the Javanese tradition and the influence of Javanese value in Islam have created two types of Islam in Java namely Islam Java (Islam Kejawen) which is known as an Islamic syncretism, and an Islam *pesantren*⁵ which is understood as the more purified Islam.⁶

There are many literatures consisting of both Islamic and Javanese values. Djamil (2000) said that Javanese coastal literature is the most influenced by Islam, for example, a manuscript entitled Wejangan Syeh Bari.⁷ In this manuscript there are AlGhazali's thought and Junaid al-Baghdadi's notions that explain about mysticisms. Meanwhile, the content of Javanese suburb literatures is more syncretism, for instance, Serat Cebolek manuscript written by Yasadipura that contains about how to reach happiness

To know this great number of manuscripts, it can be looked at various catalogues such as T.E. Behrend, Katalog Induk Naskah-Naskah Nusantara Jilid 4 Perpustakaan Nasional Republik Indonesia, Jakarta: Yayasan Obor Indonesia, 1998; Edwin Weiringa, Catalogue of Malay and Minangkabau Manuscripts in the Library of Leiden University and Other Collection in the Netherlands Volume one, Leiden: Legatum Warnerianum in Leiden University Library, 1998; Theodore, G. in life; this text mentions that a human being needs to unite himself with God. This teaching is recognized as manunggaling kawula Gusti. Another literature contains about Islamic and Javanese values is Wirid Hidayat Jati written by R. Ngb. Ranggawarsita.⁸

The strength of Islamic influence to the Javanese literature has created two different types of literature namely; (1) Literature of Islamic *santri*⁹, and (2) Javanese Islam literature.¹⁰ One of literatures that is important to be researched is a manuscript entitled “Déwi Malêka”. Poerbatjaraka (1950) categorized this manuscript as the literature of Islamic santri. However, text of Déwi Malêka consists of Islamic teaching and Javanese learning written as a poem called macapat.¹¹ Hence, this manuscript is more likely as Javanese-Islam Literature. This manuscript was written in pegon (Arabic script and used Javanese language).¹²

It is necessary to study the Islamic and Javanese values described in the text of Déwi Malêka for the reason that this manuscript contains both of those values. By examining these aspects, it will be understood how Islamic and Javanese values have influenced each other. This article, therefore, discusses these two aspects; how is the physical condition of the manuscript, what are the Islamic and Javanese values in the text of Dèwi Maléka.

⁹*Santri* means the student of pesantren (A.G. Muhaimin. “Prelude”, in Tradition and Change: In Indonesian Islamic Education. Zamakhsyari Dhofier, Jakarta: Ministry of Religious Affairs the Republic of Indonesia, 1995). Besides, there are many views about the origin of the term santri such as an opinion that the word santri is originally from the word Shastri (Sanskrit language) means an expert of Hinduism book or an expert of the religious and science books, while others say that the word santri come from Tamil language meant religious teacher (Joko Suryo, Tradisi Santri dalam Historiografi Jawa: Pengaruh Islam di Jawa, Paper presented at Seminar on Pengaruh Islam terhadap Budaya Jawa, November 30, 2000). Furthermore, in Indonesian dictionary, santri means people who devout seriously or people who study Islamic teaching (Tim Kamus besar Bahasa Indonesia, 1997). In this case, santri is defined as the people learning Islamic teaching in the pesantren (Islamic boarding school).

Literature review

There are many studies discussing about manuscript of Dèwi Maléka, to name among those scholars are; a team research affiliated with general directorate of culture in Jakarta (1992) studied the manuscript of Dèwi Maléka code Br.16. This research aimed to provide a texts edition, translation and transliteration. In this study, firstly, they wrote a brief description of the physical condition of such manuscript. Secondly, they made transliteration from the Arabic script (pegon) into Latin script. Thirdly, they translated the text from Javanese into Indonesian, and then they described the content of the text. This is a library research using a descriptive qualitative method. Finding of this research stated that this manuscript seemingly came from the pesantren,¹³ this can be seen from the core content of the text that depicted about Islamic teaching. The researchers refer their argument to Simuh's idea that pesantren's literature mostly talked about syari'at (Islamic learning). In this case, they defined syari'at as rules created by God for human's guidance, specifically to direct them when they interact with God, human beings and other creatures.¹⁴

Pudjiastuti (2006) wrote an article called "Dèwi Maléka sebuah Model Karya Sastra Islam Jawa". This writing is one of the chapters in her book entitled Naskah dan Studi Naskah. This chapter examines a manuscript

“Dèwi Maléka” code Br.16 saved in National library of Indonesia. It is started with a brief description of physical condition, followed by a summary of the content and an explanation of Islamic teaching in the text. The explanation of such teaching are described using a question-answer type similar to the original text, there are a hundred questions related to Islamic teaching.¹⁵

Drewes (1986) wrote an article entitled the Story of Dèwi Maléka. Drewes said that the story of Dèwi Maléka is in a manuscript code Cod.Or 2051 dated 1748 H (1820 AD). He stated that there are other two copies of such manuscript namely Cod.Or 7562 and Br.16. The first two manuscripts are saved in the library of Leiden University and the rest is saved in the National library Republic of Indonesia. He mentioned that the story in those manuscripts resembled with the story of Samud, although its setting is different.¹⁶ Similarly, Weiringa (1994) also mentioned that at least there are three manuscripts containing the story of Dèwi Maléka namely Cod.Or 2051, Cod.Or 7562, and Br.16.¹⁷

Weiringa (1994) explained that in Urdu the story of Dèwi Maléka is known as a pious queen from Egypt. It is told that the king from Egypt named Firoz passed away; he has a pious wife resided in the palace. After ruling the kingdom, this wife as a queen announced that she will marry anyone who can answer her 100 questions. She will give her throne to such man. Many people came and tried to answer the questions and all of them failed. One day, there was a wise man named Abd al-Alim who was able to answer all the questions, and then finally they got married. Weiringa emphasized that although there are some differences, the essence of the story was the same. The Urdu poem based on the Persian poem, it dated 11 Safar 1100 H/ 5 December 1688. The story of Dèwi Maléka was also similar to the story in Urdu entitled Risalah-e-Sawal-o-Jawab.¹⁸

Conceptual framework

This study focuses on the text of Déwi Maléka, providing with reviews of the physical condition and evaluation of the content of the text. Therefore, philology, codicology, and Islamic studies as well as Javanese studies will be utilized for this purpose. To give an overview of these frameworks, here will be explained each of the concepts; Firstly, Philology is defined as the knowledge about literature including language, letters, and culture. The term of philology is derived from the word philos means “love” and logos means “words”, so that philology means love of words. Then, this meaning changed into “love of learning” and “love of culture”.¹⁹ The object of the philology is manuscripts. Manuscript is a hand written document that are inherited by ancestors and written on the paper, lontar (palm leaf), beaten bark of trees, and beaten bark paper called dluwang.²⁰ In this study, philology is intended to know the messages (Islamic and Javanese value) in the text of Déwi Maléka, as one of the functions of philology is to understand the message of the text.²¹

Secondly, to describe the physical condition of the manuscript, this research used a codicology which means knowledge learned about the manuscript not the text.²² Refereeing to codicology, there are many aspects that can be looked at manuscripts such as the history of the manuscripts, the history of manuscript's collection, the use of manuscripts and the description of physical condition of the text such as the size of manuscript, total of the pages, number of manuscripts, type of script, language, and so forth.²³ Meanwhile, in this study, there are two elements that are described namely the history and physical condition of the selected manuscripts.

Thirdly, content analysis is applied to examine the Islamic and Javanese values in the text of Déwi Malêka because this research focuses on the ideas and notions that stated in the written document. Content analysis is a type of qualitative analysis in which researcher makes categorizations of the data.²⁴ These categorizations include the description of the similarity and the difference between those two manuscripts Br.16 and Cod.Or 7562 as well as the explanation of the Islamic and Javanese values in the texts.

Research method

This study is a qualitative research, and data are collected using library research. It focuses on examining the physical condition of the manuscripts entitled Déwi Malêka. Then, how the story described in the text is evaluated. After that, the content of the text is analyzed using Islamic studies and Javanese studies. Meanwhile, Objects of the study are two Déwi Malêka manuscripts namely Déwi Malêka code Br.16, saved in the National Library Republic of Indonesia and Cod.Or 7562 saved in the Library of Leiden University the Netherlands.

Overview and description of the manuscripts

Based on the catalogues and other writings, it is understood that there are at least four manuscripts under the title Dèwi Malêka as follows; two manuscripts saved in the National library of Republic Indonesia namely code Br.16 and Plt.8; two manuscripts saved in Leiden University library Cod Or 2051 and Cod Or 7562.²⁵

Manuscript Br.16 is a Javanese version written in pegon (Arabic letter and Javanese language), Plt. 8 is a Sundanese version written in Roman letter and Sundanese language. Meanwhile Cod.Or 2051 is written in Javanese letter and Javanese language (hanacaraka) in 1749 H (1821 A.D). Cod.Or 7562 is written in pegon copied in 1894 AD. Beside those four manuscripts there is a copy of manuscript code Cod.Or 10.770 made by A.D Soegiarto in 1936 AD. This is a Romanized version of manuscript code Cod.Or 7562.²⁶ From those four manuscripts, this research concerns on two manuscripts, namely; Déwi Malêka code Br.16 and Cod.Or 7562 as follows:

Déwi Malêka Br16

Manuscript called Déwi Malêka code Br.16 is a collection of J.L Brandes saved in the National Library of Republic of Indonesia.²⁷ Generally this manuscript is in good condition and readable. There are many holes in some part of the pages because it was eaten by moth. The text is written in pegon using black ink. The text is written in tembang macapat on the European paper. There is no watermark, chain line and laid lines in it.

The size of the manuscript is 21 x 16.2 cm and the text size is 14 x 11.7 cm. It consists of 95 pages. Most of pages comprise of 12 lines except for the page 1 and 2 that contain 10 lines. Meanwhile, in the page 95 there are 12 lines with the cone model. There is a frame in each of pages. The size of the out frame is 15.8 cm x 12.1 cm, while the size of inside frame is 15.3 cm x 11.7 cm. This manuscript is bound with a black cellophane tape and covered by a brown thick cartoon. It seems that the cover is not the original cover of such manuscript. There are two pages (page 1 and 2) detached from the binding. The first and the second page are illuminated with the floral pictures.

There is no information about the author and or the copyist. In addition, the time of the text was written or produced was not recognized. There is an unreadable table of content that is placed before the first page, it was written in Roman script; this page was loosed from the binding. In the text there is an Arabic script (: / a letter of Arabic alphabet representing glottal stop), this script plays as the symbol of stop for each sentence.

The text consists of six pupuh (chapters) namely; Asmarandana, pangkur, dhandhanggula, sinom, asmarandana, dhandanggula. Name of the first chapter is mentioned in the first part of the chapter written on the top of page. Meanwhile the rest of the chapter's name is not written clearly in the first part of the chapter. It is written in the last sentence of the previous chapter or in other word called as sasmitaning tembang; for instance, the name of the second chapter is stated in the last sentence of the first chapter and so forth.

The last chapter embraces pepali (prohibition) offered by Ki Ageng Sela which is proposed for marriage advises. There is a catchword in each odd page. In the margin of each page there is a number in Roman script referred to the number of verses of the tembang macapat (macapat song).

In page 94 there is a cross line using red ink on the word puṣuh; under this word there is a word in Roman script “pepali”.

Déwi Malêka Cod Or 7562

Manuscript entitled Déwi Malêka code Cod Or 7562 is a collection of Christian Snouck Hurgronje saved in the University Library in Leiden University. This manuscript is a copy of Priangan Manuscript dated 1283 H or 1866 A.D. The information about this date is stated in the first page. In addition, in the margin there is an additional explanation written in Roman script mentioning about it.

This Manuscript was romanized by Soegiarto under the code Cod.Or 10.770 saved at the library of Leiden University the Netherlands. Both of these versions, Cod.Or 7562 and Cod.Or 10.770, have its micro film under the code R.17.444 and R.14.940 respectively. Physically, Cod Or 7562 is in good condition and readable. It consists of sixty one pages inscribed with eleven lines of pegon. The text was written on the paper using black ink. In the cover page there is a sentence “mal 2335” written on a white sticker. In the page before the first page there is a sentence “Regaat Prof.Dr.Snouck Hurgronje 1936” written on the white sticker. The size of this manuscript is 17.6 cm x 23.4 cm, and the text size is 11 cm x 14.7 cm.

The manuscript is covered with a green thick paper and bound by a black cellophane tape. There are catchwords in certain pages which are at page 16, 32 and 48. There is no information about the author or the copyist. In the last page of manuscript there is information given by Snouck Hurgronje mentioning about this manuscript, here are the sentences “Soeloek(tembang), Priangan regentseh (1894). Theologische en mystieke antwoorden van den goeroe Abdoel Azim uit Katem of Katem in Mesir op vragen van Ratna Maleka, voratin van roem. Aan het a lot: verklaringen van eenigne gehemzinnige uitdrukingen”

Those Hurgronje's sentences give a brief explanation that this manuscript is about soeloek/tembang contained mysticism teaching; it tells about Déwi Malêka and Abdul Azim. Déwi Malêka is a queen of Rum creating a competition. Abdul Azim is a prince from Katem Egypt who participated in the competition and succeeded answering all of the questions.

There are many margin notes given by a reader. The reader underlines the word in the texts using a pencil and gives explanation in the margin. In addition, there is also a tick as a symbol that the reader corrects the word. In this case, it seems that the copyist did it because the ink and the script are similar to the ink and script in the body of text. Here are all of those notes and correction;

Table 1 The Correction and Margin notes

| Page | line | The origin of the word | The correction | Margin notes |
|------|------|------------------------|--|-------------------|
| 4 | 4 | سوره الماعن فتح خروج | The word of فتح was crossed | Sayambara nungang |
| 4 | 6 | الافانك | Underlining the word | Undangana |
| 5 | 5 | سورة الجونا | Putting a tick (✓) after the word فتح | كاس |
| 6 | 10 | كاجنوپيا | Underlining the word | kadjanapriya |
| 7 | 3 | عبد العظيم | . | Abdhi Azim Katem |
| 9 | 11 | نارا | Underlining the word | Nara |
| 15 | 10 | كوتونج | Putting a tick (✓) after the word كوتونج | كوتونج |
| 16 | 8 | نارا | Underlining the word | Nara |
| 18 | 7 | ساميا | Underlining the word | Samya |
| 18 | 9 | ساميا | Underlining the word | Samya |
| 20 | 5 | كاس | Underlining the word | كاس |
| 21 | 10 | اتيب | Underlining the word | Atip |
| 27 | 1 | سورة | Crossing the word | سورة |

| Page | line | The origin of the word | The correction | Margin notes |
|------|------|----------------------------------|---|-----------------|
| 39 | 1 | كوزة | Underlining the word | كوزة |
| 41 | 11 | كاوروزة زون | Underlining the word | Kawoworan |
| 48 | 3 | لوس لوس سلك سبلا ان وواخ كافر | Crossing these sentences | No margin notes |
| 48 | 8 | لونا | Putting a tick (√) before the word لونا | لونا |
| 51 | 6 | لونا | Putting a tick (√) before the word لونا | لونا |
| 56 | 8 | لونا | Putting a tick (√) after the word لونا | لونا |

From the above table it can be said that there are three kinds of corrections and margin notes; the first is a correction by underlining and crossing the word; then the reader or the copyist gives the correct word in the margin note. The second is a correction by putting a tick (√) before or after certain word as a sign that there is a missing word, after that the copyist or the reader adds the missing word in the margin note. The third is a correction by crossing the sentence, the reader or the copyist does not give a margin note.

In this text, there are two different types of correction; firstly a correction was given by the copyist with the characteristics as follows; the copyist used the same ink and similar script when writing the word in the margin note. Secondly, the reader made corrections by underlining the word and or crossing the sentence, after that the reader wrote a note in the margin using Roman script and pencil.

Comparison of the content between Cod Or 7562 and Br 16

Generally both manuscripts talk about the same story namely the story of Queen Déwi Maléka. She is a beautiful, perfect, knowing her responsibility, continually worshipping, patient and wise, good at many sciences such as Javanese and Arabic teaching. After the death of her father, Déwi Malêka becomes a queen of Rum. Déwi Malêka wants to have a good, wise and pious husband. To get her husband Déwi Malêka held a competition. She makes a hundred questions which should be answered by the contestants. Whoever is able to answer all the questions will be her husband and will be a king of Rum. On the other hand, whoever can not answer the questions will be killed.

It is told that there is a contestant named Ngabdul Ngalim from Turkestam Egypt. He is a king from Egypt who pretends to be a poor person. He is smart, wise, and pious. Ngabdul Ngalim can answer all of the questions precisely. To answer some of the questions he gives arguments with references to relevance passage of the Qur'an. Déwi Malêka and Ngabdul Ngalim get married. In the last part of the story, there is married advises given by Ki Ageng Sela (Déwi Malêka's teacher). During the interview, Déwi Malêka asks many questions containing Islamic teaching. In this story, it also contains some Javanese values.

Although in general those manuscripts contain the same story, in the detail there are many differences. Here are some examples of the detail similarities and differences:

Those people are cursed to be variety of animals and other forms in the world. For instance, Bani Israel who disgraced Prophet Muhammad is cursed to be cloud and thunder, a woman who tends to rebel are cursed to be a bat, a person who reduced loan payment during Prophet Adam's era was cursed to be a pig, a merchant who decrease the weight of the product was cursed to be homeless people, a person who laugh at people's praying was cursed to be a cat.

Tex of Déwi Maléka concise of Javanese values that are explained at a chapter called pupuh

It depicts at the explanation of wedding ceremony in which mostly refers to the Javanese tradition. Furthermore, the last chapter of Br.16 is pepali that include some advices from Kyai Agung Sela. Meanwhile, the last chapter of Cod.Or 7562 comprises of Javanese phrases which has great meaning of Islamic teaching. At the chapter six of Br.16, it includes pepali, many type of deeds that need to be avoided by human being. For instance; do not be greedy, do not bother other people because people who often bother others would die soon, do not intervene other's problems (oyo siro watek dahwen, oyo watek ngaruh aruhi), do not expect too much to others, do not be jelouse, because people commit a bad deed would receive a bad deed as a reply (oyo siro watek dahwen, oyo watek ngaruh aruhi), people should not follow their desires during their lifes.

At the last chapter of Cod.Or 7562 mentions Javanese phrases (pepatah) complemented with its meaning. That explanation would lead readers to be a wiser and to be close to God during their living. Here are some of those Javanese phrases; Huruf kang tanpa sekar (the essence of God/Allah), damar murup tanpa sumbu (the perpetual essence), puteri wilis tanpa wilis (Allah/God is created by himself), anut satek pisan atigasi (alert toward God who has a character of oneness), tanggal kapurnama (feels to have one condition), amyah geni dadamaran (finding science after the existence of science), warangka manjing curiga (before becoming corpse), perahu amot segara (soul after becoming corpse), kuda ngurab ing pandangan (do not be fell burden when seeing God and God's messenger), gugupat luluhur (no existence except the existence of God), tapa kuntul ing layang (alms giving that are taken out from the body), bumi pinudum siti (body has intention), susuring anging (body, soul, breath), madep ngalor selagi ngidul (followers of God), tunjung tanpa telaga (at the time God created Nur Muhammad and it is God's saying at murtabah).

Closing remarks

Dèwi Maléka Br.16 and Cod.Or 7562 are two manuscripts that have similarities and differences. Generally, the story, setting of the story, and figures in the story are the same, but details of each content are difference. Thus, it can be concluded that this manuscript Cod.Or 7562 is not a copy of Br.16, and vice versa. Besides, both manuscripts are different. The general physical condition of the manuscripts is good and readable. Texts concise of Islamic and Javanese teaching which is exposed in an interesting ways, there are questions and answers between queen of Dèwi Maléka and Ngabdul Alim [Abdul Azim]. Moreover, there some advises from Javanese phrases to be a good person.
